

Explanations

Real/likely situations: first conditional

- With if
A first conditional describes a real or likely situation. A present tense is used after if, but the time referred to is the future. Will/Won't are common in the result clause.

If you fall, I won't be able to catch you!

This means that there is a real possibility this will happen.

Going to can be used instead of will.

If it rains, we're going to get wet.

The modal verb can is also common in first conditional sentences.

If the cases are too heavy, I can help you carry them.

- Unless, provided, as long as

Unless means If... not.

Unless you leave at once, I'll call the police.

If you don't leave at once, I'll call the police.

Provided and as long as can also introduce a condition.

Provided you leave now, you'll catch the train.

- With the imperative

It is common to use the imperative instead of if.

Get me some cigarettes, and I'll pay you later.

- With should

We can use should instead of if in a conditional sentence. It means if by any chance ... and makes the action less likely.

Should you see John, can you give him a message?

Unreal/imaginary situations: second conditional

- With if

A second conditional describes an unreal or imaginary situation. A past simple tense is used after if, but the time referred to is the future. Would is common in the result clause.

If you fell, you would hurt yourself.

This means that there is a small possibility that this will happen. The situation and its result are imagined.

The modal verbs might and could are common in second conditional sentences.

If you became a millionaire, you might be unhappy.

- Were

Were is often used instead of was in formal language. Note that were is not stressed in speech.

If I were taller, I'd join the basketball team.

If I were you, I'd leave now. (I and you are stressed in speech)

- Were to

Were to is another way of expressing a second conditional sentence.

If they were to offer me the job, I'd turn it down.

Unreal/imaginary past situations: third conditional

- With if

A third conditional describes an unreal or imaginary situation in the past. A past perfect tense is used after if. Would + have + past participle is used in the result clause.

If John had studied more, he would have got better marks.

This means that John didn't study more. A past situation, different to the one that really happened, is imagined.

The modal verbs might and could are common in this kind of sentence.

If you had tried harder, you might have succeeded.

- Mixed conditions

For past events which have a result continuing in the present, it is possible to use the form of a third conditional in the if-clause, and the form of a second conditional in the result clause.

If you had saved some money, you wouldn't be so hard up.

Other if sentences

If can mean when in the sense of whenever.

If/When/Whenever it rains, we play football indoors instead.

In this type of sentence we use the present simple in both the if-clause and the result clause.

If can also mean if it is true that.

If (it is true that) you have a job like that, you are very lucky.

If (it is true that) nothing happened, you were lucky.

If+ past simple can be used for past events with a real possibility, or that we know are true. This type of sentence does not have any special grammar rules.

If you missed the TV programme last night, you can borrow my recording.

If the police arrested him, they must suspect him.

Key points

- 1 The present tense form in first conditional sentences does not refer to present time. It refers to future time.
- 2 The past tense form in second conditional sentences does not refer to past time. It refers to future time.
- 3 The difference between first and second conditional sentences can depend on the attitude of the speaker. The future situation might have a high possibility of happening (first conditional) or a low possibility (second conditional).
If she falls, she'll land in the safety net.
 (This means that there is a real possibility that she will fall.)
If she fell she would land in the safety net.
 (I am commenting on an imaginary situation, and I do not think she is likely to fall.)
- 4 Might and could are common in conditional sentences when we are uncertain about our predictions.
If you leave now, you might catch the train.
If you asked him nicely, he might agree.
If you'd continued driving in that way, you could have hit another car.
- 5 Mixed conditional forms are possible, especially where a past event has a present result.
If Brenda hadn't stolen the money, she wouldn't be in prison.
- 6 Unless, provided, and as long as can introduce conditions.
